2010 ELIGO SHIRAZ

REVIEWS

98+ points, Lisa Perrotti-Brown, The Wine Advocate, March 2014

Deep garnet-purple colored and profoundly scented of blueberry preserves, blackberry tart and chocolate box intermingled with an undercurrent of star anise, coffee, rare beef and tar, the full-bodied 2010 Eligo Shiraz is richly fruited with layers of opulent, berry preserve and spice cake flavours supported by solid foundation of firm, velvety tannins and balanced acid. It finished with outstanding persistence.

95 points, Mike Bennie, WBM Magazine, July 2013

Not shy or retiring in any stretch of the imagination, but one to bask in for concentration and carry of flavour - yet there's not a bashing about of the palate, more genial envelopment that works with concentration, spice and judicious oak.

95 points, Joe Czerwinski, Wine Enthusiast, February 2014

This likely the most ageworthy Shiraz winemaker John Duval has crafted since leaving Penfolds. The oak is subtle, the fruit still tight. It's full bodied but bursting with potential, shown in hints of black cherries and plums, mocha and mint. The finish is long, mouthwatering and softly dusty in texture, making it luscious yet firm.

95 points, James Halliday, Halliday Wine Companion 2013, July 2013

Essency black fruits, savoury roasted meat aromas and fragrant wood spices all evident on the bouquet; the palate is full bodied and muscular with prodigious tannins lying in waiting beneath the succulent black fruits on offer; long, precise, complex and expansive to conclude.
